

6 choices for your Super sipping

What an exciting weekend we have in store for the Valley! The Super Bowl is finally here. We are so fortunate to have so many choices to go along with it. The challenge isn't what to wear, but what to drink, and how to get my buddies over the shock that my beverage of choice doesn't come from a very large pressurized aluminum container. But once they taste any of these fabulous departures, the only issue remaining will be the obvious problem of fitting a wine bottle into a favorite beer hat. If I had more time I'd work on that, but for now I'll stick with the Super recommendations of the week.

Pacific Rim Sweet Riesling, U.S. ($10-$12) - Though the label states "Sweet Riesling," it isn't overly so. The color is a pale watery yellow. The aroma is muted, with a little green fruit and herbal quality. The taste is bright and expressive, and at 8.5 percent alcohol with a touch of sweetness, it'll take down any amount of ketchup. 84 points

Tarbell, owner of Tarbell's restaurant in Phoenix, can be reached at wine@tarbells.com.

Source: <http://www.azcentral.com/arizonarepublic/food/articles/0130tarbell0130.html>